

THIS IS ME - NDINI

A Keynote by Cyril Junior Dim

ABOUT THE KEYNOTE

A simple word in ChiShona, one of the native languages of Zimbabwe, carries wisdom that many people overlook - the wisdom in recognizing and accepting self.

For many, self-acceptance is a cliché of modern media, often limited to superficial qualities like our physical appearance. The story of my life has led me to examine self-acceptance from an even more important angle: Identity.

Acknowledging and accepting one's identity is key to thriving as a family member, professional and as a member of a vastly diverse community and world. Please enjoy the story of Ndini.

WHO CAN BENEFIT?

- Teams comprised of young Professionals
- Company events and galas
- Conference Attendees
- Foreigners & Expats
- Students

WHAT YOU WILL DISCOVER

- When have you felt different?
- How does one stop being different and start being special?
- How can you confront discouragement if you ever feel different?

WHAT YOU WILL EXPERIENCE

- A compelling story about challenges of growing up with mixed ancestry
- A collective discovery of the lessons learned from travel around the world
- Reflection on how you can use a simple Shona word to strengthen your resolve and self-confidence

“

Ndini, what a powerful and inspiring speech, what a compelling call to us all to appreciate who we really are, what a strong message to help us accept and love ourselves as we are. Yes yes yes... Ndini
